Labor Supports Justice Black of New York For U. S. Supreme Court

WASHINGTON—Org a nized labor will be ready with a candidate of its own when the next vacancy on the U. S. Supreme Court occurs.

He is quiet-spoken, square-jawed Justice William Harmon Black of the New York Supreme Court, one of the most liberal members on that noted tribunal. New York already is represented in the Supreme Court by Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo.

In a red-hot decision upholding the hotly controversial Section 7a, Judge Black declared the law to be labor's Magna Charta; asserted that without it industrial progress could not be made.

"The court," he said, "knows no more courageous piece of legislation ever adopted, or more appropriate to such a pressing emergency."

Labor hailed the decision as its most signal court victory under the New Deal regime. Employers prepared to take the verdict to higher courts.

Cure-alls

No day passes without some new "discovery" being presented to government officials for restoring prosperity. Bred on such stories as that of Isaac Newton and the apple, thousands of unble people hope to store the Hall of Fame with their new remedies.

From Salem, Missouri, comes word that a woodchopper and railroad maker, who has spent a great deal of time thinking about financial subjects, has a plan for "complete restoration."

A shepherd, living near Buhl, Idaho, has divided his time between watching the sheep grazing in the foothills of the Rockies and concocting a new solution for the debt problem, with "knee-action that will not bend to Europe."

A St. Louis fisherman, living on a houseboat, has plenty of time to think. Having hit upon a unique monetary theory, he wants to expound his ideas in a big way.

Nearly all of them are mailed to Washington.

Voluntary

A group of Senate veterans idling over the coffee and cigars in the Senate dining room were exchanging reminiscences of their service in the historic chamber.

The conversation turned to pre-siding officers they had known. Arizona's witty Henry Ashurst told this choice anecdote of the late Calvin Coolidge, when he was Vice-President.

A Republican senator, known more for his volubility than persuasiveness, was expounding at great length on a bill. Coolidge listened to him with increasing impatience.

Finally, he summoned Senator George McLean, Republican whip. "Senator," Coolidge said, "you tell that man that he won't get a vote but his own if he keeps this up."

McLean dutifully approached the speaker. He whispered. The harangue, without pausing in his tirade, shot back a whispered reply. McLean returned to the rostrum.

"What'd he say?" demanded Coolidge.

"He said for me to go to hell."

"He did," Coolidge said. "Well, Senator, I know of no law, or rule of the Senate, which obliges you to do so."

CITY HOSPITAL CHARITY CASES ARE DISCUSSED

Councilmen Intend to Pay More Heed to Operation of Berger

DR. JONES IS HEARD

Urges Separate Operation Of Laboratory

Charity cases at Berger hospital which are gradually running the institution deeper into "the red" were discussed from almost every conceivable angle at council meeting Wednesday evening. The appearance of Dr. Howard Jones to urge a full-time technician brought on the discussion with several members of council asking him questions concerning the institution's operation.

Dr. Jones presented council with an addition to the hospital ordinance which would cover the technician's duties. "The X-ray and laboratory departments of Berger hospital should be money makers for the institution," Dr. Jones said, "but someone should be put in charge of them at all times. The equipment is valued at several thousand dollars and the person in charge should be under sufficient bond to assure their proper care."

ADVOCATES BOOKS
The veteran physician, who has always taken an active part where the hospital is concerned, said that in October 85 cases went through these two departments and the lowest charge for any of them was $2. He advocated a separate set of books to be kept in the technician's hands alone.

The addition to the ordinance was placed in the hands of Solicitor Carl Leist with the matter referred to the hospital committee of C. O. Leist, Frank Marion and Ben H. Gordon.

As soon as this action was taken Councilman Marion asked Dr. Jones "if the uses of the hospital are being abused?" He called attention to the great number of charity cases the expense from which are never paid. He asked who was responsible for so many such cases.

Dr. Jones answered him by saying that figures show several thousands of dollars charged to the poor of the city as individuals instead of to the city where the charge should have been made. "Most of these were charity cases in which the doctors, too, went without pay. If these bills had been made to the city the hospital would not show such a deficit as now appears to exist."

DOCTORS NOT TO BLAME
"The physicians of the city cannot send any charity case to the hospital without approval of the person responsible for the hospital (the safety director). The townships, too, must warrant their charity patients into the institution but many of them have not paid their bills."

"If the rules are followed closely no one can get into the hospital without a warrant from the proper person. The city, the townships (Continued On Page Seven)

FOUR BANDITS GET $48,000

Payroll of Philadelphia Electric Co. Stolen In Daylight Robbery.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—In a bold daylight foray four armed bandits raided a branch office of the Philadelphia Electric company here today and escaped with a Christmas payroll consisting of $48,000 in cash.

The daring robbery was tentatively tied up by police with the criminal exploits of Robert Mais, arch-killer and escaped convict, hunted through the east. Investigating authorities said two employees of the electric company had partially identified the leader of the holdup gang as Mais, suspected kidnaper-killer of William "Big Bill" Weiss, Philadelphia night life figure.

Their faces hidden by heavy masks, the four bandits drove up to the branch office in a large sedan. Four robbers, each carrying a sawed-off shotgun, leaped out of the machine and walked briskly into the building.

After clubbing a watchman with the butt of a shotgun, the robbers proceeded to the paymaster's office. Denied admittance, they shot out a glass panel and unlocked the door. Twenty employees, awaiting wages at the payroll window, were instructed to keep their hands in the air while the bandits scooped up two leather bags containing the money.

FAMED PLANE FEARED LOST

Dutch Air Liner With Seven Aboard Missing In Far East; Search Starts.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Fears were felt today for three passengers and four members of the crew of the giant Dutch air liner which won the handicap prize in the recent London to Melbourne air derby. It was stated today in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Bagdad.

The ship, an American-made Douglas plane which was widely praised for its performance in the marathon, left Cairo last night for Bagdad, bound for Batavia, Dutch East Indies with Christmas mail from Holland.

Airplanes and armored cars are scouring the desert between Cairo and Bagdad, the dispatch said. A terrific storm raged through the night and it was feared the ship had encountered serious difficulties.

When the jury of 10 men and two women returned the guilty verdict after deliberating three hours and 25 minutes, defense attorneys said they would file a motion for a new trial by Saturday. If the motion is overruled, they are expected to carry the case to the higher courts.

Otto was convicted specifically of embezzling $804.20 by allegedly turning in expense accounts for trips by city officials which never actually were made.

TWO KILLED IN RIOT IN SOUTH: GUARD RUSHED

Mob Bent on Lynching Negro Tricked, Burns Court House

TOWN IS TERRORIZED

Girl's Attacker Spirited to Nashville

SHELBYVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 20.—Five hundred national guardsmen converged on riot-torn Shelbyville today with orders to quell a lynch-maddened mob that dynamited and burned Bedford co courthouse after two white men were killed and seven wounded battling militiamen for possession of a negro prisoner.

While flames still licked at the ruins of the historic $150,000 courthouse the mob began breaking up early today into small groups of stalking demonstrators armed with pistols, knives and clubs. Occasional random shots were fired in the air by the rioters.

With the arrival of the national guard reinforcements, ordered here from Nashville by Gov. Hill McCallister, it was hoped that the mob would be completely dispersed.

NEGRO SPIRITED AWAY

Meanwhile the negro whom the rioters sought to lynch, E. K. Harris, 22, was safely lodged at Nashville under a heavy guard. He had been brought here under guard of 111 national guardsmen to stand trial on charges of attacking a 14-year-old white girl.

After repeated savage attacks on the courthouse, that were repulsed by the bayonets, tear gas and machine guns of the militiamen, rioting broke out anew last night when the mob learned that it had been tricked and the prisoner spirited away in the disguise of a soldier.

The rioters swept authorities aside and, after saturating the halls and stairways of the courthouse where the negro had been on trial, set fire to the structure. Sticks of dynamite planted in the building exploded amid the gaso-line-fueled flames.

COUNCIL TALKS OF TRAFFIC LAWS

A discussion of traffic in the city was included in council's business Wednesday with no action taken.

Several councilmen took part in the discussion with W. M. Reid urging that through and stop streets by surveyed by the council and marked. After they are marked, he urged, see that the law is enforced.

Three Elevator Safes 'Cracked'

Kiss Cost $1,000

Madison-Co Scene of Activities of Safe Robbing Gang; Loot Is Small.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Old-time professional safe-blowers, who are reported to be concentrating upon grain elevators in rural sections, were suspected today in connection with the cracking of two safes at Sedalia and one at South Solon last night or early this morning.

The eggs obtained only 68 pennies from two safes which were blown in the office of the Sedalia Grain & Lumber Co., but they took along a $75 typewriter also. Damage to the two safes, one of which was unlocked and could have been opened without effort, was estimated at $150.

From Sedalia, the eggs went to South Solon where they "cracked" the safe of the Guy Currey elevator. They found the safe empty but rifled a cash drawer in the office of between $8 and $10.

Fingerprint experts from the London prison farm conducted an investigation but the eggs left no tell-tale marks leading to the conviction that the safe-blowers were old-time professionals.

COUNCIL LOOKS TO SALES TAX

Little Money on Hand For Operation of All Departments; List Balances.

City council is looking forward to receipts from the newly-voted sales tax to solve its financial problems. Just when the sales tax money will start coming into the city coffers is not certain.

Ben H. Gordon, chairman of the finance committee, recommended to council Wednesday evening that bills now held against the city which are the most urgent should be paid from money now available. "The others will have to wait," he said.

At present the city has $12,238.69 in all its funds. This is divided $5,364.85 in general; $1,781.18 in library; $915.04 in the library; $798.81 in auto street repair; $1,608.91 in gasoline tax, and $1,770.90 in hospital.

There are a number of outstanding bills of considerable consequence which would cut the general fund almost in half if all were paid. The bills include, $38.37 for repair of the city Ford; $168 to Mary Butler for nursing; $173.34 to physicians; $32.50 for ambulances; $180 for burials; $65 for food, rent and coal. Money needed at the hospital includes: salaries, $1,250; provisions, $350; medical supplies, $350; other supplies, $75; fuel and light, $50.

The city must continue operation and payment of its employees including elective officials from money now at hand.

BARBERS TOLD TO BEGIN CODE PRICES FRIDAY

Board to See That Prices of 40 and 25 cents Are Enforced

PROSECUTION FACED

Davis Instructed to Support Code Order

All Circleville barbers were warned by Ray W. Davis, prosecuting attorney, Thursday that they must comply with minimum rates as established by the Ohio barber code compliance board, or suffer the consequences.

An order has been given to the prosecutor to see that all barbers are charging the code price of 40 cents for haircuts and 25 cents for shaves starting Friday. At present the rates are 25 cents for haircuts and 20 or 15 cents for shaves in most shops.

Shortly after the code was put into effect in the state practically all local shops adhered to the law charging the 40-25 schedule. It was not long, however, until first one shop then another started to slash the price, the later ones to save their own businesses in the face of cut-rate prices.

THREE ON BOARD

The compliance committee for this city includes Everett Ferguson, John Wilson and Sherman Leasure.

Heavy fines are provided under the law for those who fail to comply. The local shops also agreed upon an hour and closing rule in which all shops were to close at 7 in the evening except Saturday 10 p. m. being the hour that day. They were also to close Wednesday at noon but many have also been flaunting that agreement.

Strict enforcement of the minimum charge is pledged by the compliance board with the support of Prosecutor Davis.

JAPAN TO DEFY NAVAL POWERS; READY FOR ARMS RACE

DEFY HURLED BY MINISTER

Navy Now Stronger In Personnel and Morale Than U. S., He Charges.

TOKIO, Dec. 20.—Defiance of other naval powers, with the first warning from so high an authority that Japan will not shrink from a naval building race, was hurled today by Japan's foreign minister, Koki Hirota.

Japan's fair and just attitude," Hirota said, referring to his country's decision to kill the 5-5-3 ratio by abrogating the Washington treaty, "if they insist on having their own way, Japan may refuse to make concessions, and will resist them."

STRONGER PERSONNEL

Hirota's declaration indirectly gave the seal of government approval to the declaration by Rengo, the semi-official news agency, that Japan is fully prepared for any building competition. The Japanese navy, according to Rengo, is superior to the American in personnel, morale, and building technique.

The foreign minister also reiterated Japan's demand that battleships and aircraft carriers be abolished "for the sake of world peace."

Japan favors more submarines,

which she views as "defensive" vessels.

"Japan is a rising nation, endowed with lofty pride," Hirota said, "and in advocating the policy of abolishing battleships and aircraft carriers, she is ready to make considerable sacrifices."

He added that Japan is willing to be a party to a "treaty safeguarding peace."

HASTEN PARLEYS

It was understood that an agreement has been reached among Britain, the United States, and Japan to fix an early date for the resumption of the talks, and that, meanwhile, informal exchanges will continue in order to hasten the resumption of formal parleys.

SCIOTO-TWP

The Priscilla Doll contest ended at Thanksgiving time. All the girls in the seventh grade English class dressed their dolls as near like Priscilla as they could. The first prize doll was Marjory Tomlinson's, the second best was Doris Hill's and the third was Twila Sheets'. Two of the boys, Evan Dean and Paul Green built a church and the story of the "Courtship of Miles Standish" ended with the wedding at the church.

The eighth grade English class is spending some time on oral reading. The need of better readers has been made evident so each pupil is trying very hard to improve. A daily record of each pupil's mistakes is kept.

The Freshman English class is studying poetry. They have spent some time scanning and studying meter. They tried to make rhyming couplets according to form but they were not a success as to meter even if they did rhyme. From this they went into the study of the ballad.

The following seventh and eighth grade pupils who missed no words in spelling during the past six weeks are: Evan Dean, Doris Hill, Virginia Hill, Twila Sheets and Marjorie Tomlinson in the seventh grade and Opal Belle Beavers in the eighth grade.

The seventh grade honor roll for the second six weeks was: Warren Beers, Gardner Beatty, Evan Dean, Virginia Hill, and Doris Hill. In the eighth grade are Opal Belle Beavers, Virginia Hoskins, Harold Norris, Peter Tomlinson, Lawrence Neal and Anna Louise Bandy.

As a special assignment the Commercial Law class last week one day made cross word puzzles using terms studied in law. Whenever we have any spare time one of these puzzles is put on the board for the class to work out together.

A purely social program has been planned for the December meeting of the Societas Latina. This program consists of Christmas songs in Latin and Latin games.

Last week we gave the state tests in all subjects. The required tests have been sent into the State Department of Education and we are now awaiting the results of the tests throughout the state.

The scores in the tests were very good, although in some cases there were too many errors made. The second year typing class is working on a special assignment—spelling and division of words into syllables.

According to present plans Scioto will play its next basketball game with New Holland Thursday Dec. 20. The grades will present their Christmas program Friday afternoon, and the high school will present a combination pageant and play on Friday night. Everyone is invited.

Of course, if you prefer, the sleeves may be made without the slit.

Pattern 9218 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric.

A Butterfly in Applique Is a Handsome Decoration

PATTERN 5134

Though it isn't possible for us to have butterflies in the middle of winter, the needlewoman can conjure them for herself, using scraps of gay-colored material to do so. This butterfly—a nice big patch—is easy to sew on. You can applique it on leaving the edge raw and buttonholing it down, or you can turn under the edge and fasten it with slip stitch, blanket or outline stitch. The touches of embroidery on the patch add to its brightness as do the sprays of French knot flowers that complete the design. These motifs are lovely on tea-cloths, scarfs, pillow, buffet sets and many other linens.

In pattern 5134 you will find two 7 inch butterfly corners as shown, two 4 1/2 inch matching flower sprays and four 2 1/2 x 3 inch flower sprays; directions for doing applique; illustrations of all stitches needed; material requirements, and color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., 124 W. Main-st., Circleville, O.

YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

THE remaining days of the week will be busy shopping days in Circleville's stores. While local merchants without exception state that the holiday business so far has been considerably larger than last season, they anticipate the peak in sales during the days remaining before Santa Claus makes his annual visit.

City and small town merchants handling practically all lines of merchandise are reporting through their organizations that stocks are being rapidly depleted by early shoppers, and that there has been an unexpected trend to the better quality of merchandise for gift purposes, denoting that there is a larger surplus of cash budgeted for this particular purpose than there has been for several years.

Many of Circleville's merchant establishments have been crowded with eager shoppers during the past few days. Window displays are attractive, merchandise is well displayed in the various establishments, and extra salespeople have been employed to aid shoppers in their selections.

There also seems to be a clear indication that "buying at home" has been adopted as a slogan by practically all residents of the community this season, a slogan that should be in effect the year round. Shoppers have learned by comparison that local merchants give them service in quality, selectivity and price comparable to similar establishments in much larger cities, and consequently give the home merchant first consideration.

ADMIRE HOME CITY

AT the approach of the Yuletide season, Circleville's business and residence sections are reaching a high standard of excellence in beautiful holiday decorations. The array of colored lights and special decorations at the intersection of Main and Court-st causes much favorable comment from residents and visitors alike, and individual decorations are fitting and elaborate. The shopping district attracts much attention and favorable comment, and visitors are loud in their praise of the decorations throughout the city as a whole.

The remaining days of this week will see many homes about the city donning true holiday attire, which will add much to the beauty as well as the spirit of Christmas.

HOW CIVILIZED?

A FREQUENTLY heard opinion that too many people are going to college finds formal expression in a report to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers by a divisional officer, Marion B. Richardson. Mr. Richardson says the proportion of college graduates to the population is far too high, from a materialistic standpoint, and is likely to have political repercussions.

The figure given in this report is "nearly 3,000,000" college graduates, which looks like a good many. One in every forty-four persons, the report says, a proportion far exceeding that of any other nation. But state it in percentages and it doesn't look quite as formidable, no more than 2 1/2 per cent. The statement that the proportion is higher than in any other country is not surprising considering the fact that under our system of compulsory education, schooling is more general here than in most other countries.

The report sidesteps its own case. Although it thinks the percentage of engineers—one for every 320 persons—is too high for the good of the several engineering professions, it finds that "the opportunity for arriving at a job of college grade is fair." That, if true, is good news for the young men in these discouraging times. Engineering, despite the alleged overcrowding, is named in the report as fourth among the professions from the income-producing standpoint. It takes considerable credulity to accept the report's statement that a Protestant clergyman has best chances of a good income, followed in order by the physicians and lawyers.

The materialistic standpoint is not the only one that appeals to college graduates. Many of them, in fact, place the satisfaction of an education higher. But the meat of the question is this: Is 2 1/2 per cent of the population too large a proportion to receive a higher education? Is it more than the country can absorb? If it is, how civilized are we?

Mr. Richardson's advice loses none of its timeliness in consequence of the printer's error which made it read that it is time for manufacturers to "rehabilitate their pants."

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

THE carol was originally a joyous dance, a sign of liberation from the religious austerity of the Puritan era. Percy Dearmer, writing in "The Oxford Book of Carols," says: "The carol, for forsaking the timeless contemplative melodies of the church, began the era of modern music, which throughout has been based on the dance."

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Howard was obliged to spend Christmas day with his parents but on Christmas eve he and Caroline put up a tree in the house on Edge Street and festooned it with silver and hung it with blue lights. There were masses of white and yellow chrysanthemums in tall glass vases that showed the long stems, wreaths of hemlock and holly, and just where Howard wanted it—a bunch of mistletoe.

The house was gay and festive in appearance on Christmas morn when Caroline and her father sat down to a breakfast of waffles and honey, but their hearts were heavy. Suddenly Caroline put down her fork, pushed her chair back and flew around to her father. He held her like a child while she sobbed out her loneliness.

Presently, with Mrs. Stevenson, they gathered up their gifts at the foot of the tree and opened them. There was a wristwatch for Caroline from Howard, a vest watch, and chain, for her father, a camel's hair sweater for Mrs. Stevenson, and all the small things that Caroline had made for Philip. From him there was a surprise for her—her mother's wedding ring. Caroline made him wish it on her finger—just for the day.

There were more mother, the old Philip of pride and distinguished bearing as he slipped the platinum band over his daughter's slender finger and bent his lips to it with the wish in his heart that it should bring her more happiness than it had brought to her parents to unwrap. Caroline's hand-bag for Mrs. Stevenson, a box of child-made gifts from the twins, a knitted scarf and beret and hemstitched handkerchiefs from Fern. And then there was left a square box with a card from Mrs. Stuart and Malcolm.

Caroline was conscience stricken when she saw that it was a Christmas cake that obviously Mrs. Stuart had herself baked for them.

Her father, noting her expression, said: "Didn't you send anything Caroline?"

Caroline shook her head. "Only a card I've scarcely seen them for weeks. I know I ought to be ashamed—after all their kindness—and I am."

Mr. Rutledge glanced over the room. "You might take over those chrysanthemums," he suggested, nodding toward the largest vaseful. "And this box of glass fruits."

Caroline picked up one of Howard's gifts. "Wrap some paper around the flower stems for me, please," she said to Mrs. Stevenson. "I'll go right over."

There was an eagerness in her manner that was slightly surprising to her father. She hurried into the hall and got a coat from the closet, but she did not stop for hat or gloves, although it was snowing heavily.

She was almost hidden behind the flowers when she rang the Stripling's doorbell. Malcolm answered. "Merry Christmas," she cried gaily. "Oh! this box under my arm. It's lipping! Take it quick!"

Malcolm reached out and took the box. "Come in," he invited "if you're really there. I can't see you."

Caroline still held the flowers as she stepped across the threshold. Malcolm closed the door behind her and turned to take them. The day was darkening; he had snapped on the hall light. It glinted on the wedding ring as Caroline extended her hands.

"Why, what's the matter?" Malcolm had uttered a smothered sound, expressive of unfeigned surprise. But he smiled as he took the flowers from Caroline's arms and said: "It is just Merry Christmas, or Merry Christmas and much happiness."

"Well," Caroline replied, not yet realizing what he meant, "it isn't really a merry Christmas, Malcolm, or a very happy one, either, in our house. But you and your mother were very sweet to remember us. I hope it is a happier one for you."

"I'm sorry," Malcolm said softly. "Mother's in the kitchen. Shall I tell her you're here, or will you come with me?"

"I'll come with you," Caroline said quickly. "I love your mother's kitchen. It always smells of spice or something nice."

Mrs. Stuart was happy to see her. She put down the goose she was dressing, dried her hands and took the chrysanthemums from Malcolm. "I never saw such big ones!" she exclaimed in delight. "How nice of you, dear, to bring them yourself. Here, Malcolm, reach down that big pitcher for me until I find something better to put them in."

Relieved of the flowers she turned back to Caroline. "Let me look at you. Still too thin but you're stronger, aren't you? Poor child." She added the last word in tenderest sympathy, shaking her head. Caroline struggled to keep back her tears.

"There, there, cry if you feel like it," Mrs. Stuart soothed her. "It wouldn't be natural if you didn't want to on the first Christmas."

"But it—it won't do any good," Caroline said brokenly. "And it will be harder for Father if I let go."

She held out her left hand. "He gave me Mother's wedding ring," she looked up at Malcolm. "Oh," she said, "you saw it, didn't you? And you thought that."

"You were married," he admitted. Mrs. Stuart frowned. "Malcolm, how could she when..." she stopped in embarrassment.

"Please," Caroline begged, "let's not talk about me. I came to thank you for the cake, Mrs. Stuart. I know it will be delicious. We'll cut it at dinner. Father and I will be alone. Mrs. Stevenson wants to go to her son's after she's roasted our turkey."

"Christmas alone isn't Christmas," Mrs. Stuart said sadly. "Malcolm and I hoped his Uncle Dan would come with his family and spend the day with us but they had to go to his wife's folks. We're just going to have a goose all by ourselves."

"Why," Caroline cried, "that's silly, isn't it? You two alone, and Father and I. There must be some family in the neighborhood that would like a goose. Let's find one, and then you and Malcolm can help us eat the turkey. It would cheer Father immensely. And I just can't bear the thought of that lonely dinner. Say you'll come—please."

The day, from that point on, became brighter for all of them, although the snow continued to fall in flakes so heavy and thick that the daylight was turned into a semiblaze of dusk.

Caroline brought out more red candles and softened the room with their light. There was a bowl of poinsettias in the dining table and red candles there, too.

Mr. Rutledge mixed the Christmas drink from an old family recipe and they drank to each other's good cheer. Mrs. Stuart watched him, first in anxiety, then in surprise and finally in a newly found respect as the dinner progressed and he served the wine that Howard had brought, filling his glass only a second time and then leaving it untouched.

And he had carved the turkey beautifully. Mrs. Stevenson had declared it ready to serve, partaken of the toddy with them, and departed. Caroline had decorated it and Malcolm had carried it to the table.

By common consent no one spoke of sadness except during a brief moment when Philip stood before Alva's portrait—the one rare possession left to him—with bowed head and trembling lips.

The dinner was not without interruptions, however. Every hour a messenger boy arrived with a telegram for Caroline—a series that Howard had arranged in advance. There was, after she had read them, a brighter light in her eyes, but upon returning to her guests she avoided Malcolm's gaze. He seemed so pathetically happy. She hoped he had not guessed what the messages were, but if he had she did not want him to see how much they pleased her, letting her know that Howard hated having to spend the day away from her as much as she herself hated it.

It would be, she hoped, their last Christmas apart. But if it were not... well, she could be in her own home, in his home, and Howard would not go on forever with a secret marriage merely because of his father's disapproval.

She held some vague high hope that Howard would eventually arrive out financial independence for himself. They would plan, and work and save.

It was time to cut the cake. Caroline came out of her love dream with a start as her father's voice recalled her to her present surroundings. Her glance met Malcolm's. She saw that a shadow had come over his face, and thereafter she forced herself to stop thinking of Howard and devote herself to the occasion.

When it was over, and the Stuarts were departing, Malcolm took her hands to say goodnight. Caroline could have cried over the way his fingers held to hers, as though if he let them go he never would find them again. But his voice held nothing more betraying than a slight catch as he wished her many more joyful Christmases in the future.

When he was gone she felt indescribably lonely. Perhaps they would not be together again, except for a few moments of passing contact. In a few weeks she would be Howard's bride, go away on a wedding trip. She might not return to South Town after that. And Malcolm had been a dear friend. She could never forget the fun they'd had. Yes, it had been fun to ride on his motorcycle, to lunch with him in parks and go to the movies with him. And the U—how far away that seemed! She wondered if Malcolm had given up his studies too. She hated herself for being too absorbed in her own affairs even to ask him that. She felt like going to him and begging him to talk about himself, tell her that it wasn't true that all she had brought him was unhappiness. She wanted to know that he would go on with his shining hopes and ambition, that he would not waste precious time just because one girl in millions had not fallen in love with him.

But of course she did not go. And at some time between eleven and twelve that night Howard telephoned to her. He had slipped out of the Dunsworth family party for a little fresh air and exercise, as he told his mother, but in reality to call Caroline.

He told her he had missed her dreadfully, had thought of her every moment, and would never let himself be separated from her another Christmas day.

Caroline fell asleep assured of his love, and happy in the belief that she still loved him more than any one else.

The few intervening weeks before Christmas were to receive her decree Howard swiftly after that Caroline was busy night and day making most of her own trousseau with Mrs. Stevenson's help, fighting her father's temptations with him, encouraging him, driving down for a week-end with Fern when the baby came, trying to give Howard all the time she could, and still working on at the factory.

Even her father thought this was far-fetched, but he was silent on the subject, because he had not yet found a way to earn money. He wanted to give Caroline her mother's portrait for a wedding present and so he would not sell it, although it had been painted by a good artist and would have brought a handsome sum in any market. The house he planned to put on the market and repay, with all it brought him above the mortgage, his debt to Howard, and certain others. In the mean time Caroline's small salary was practically all they had for their living expenses. And Caroline was determined that Howard should not feed them. It rankled still in her mind that it was his father who had taken the factory away from them. If she must accept Howard's support for her father, she must, but not until they had the money. Howard had given up trying to persuade her to a different course.

Gwendolyn did not communicate with him when she was free but he received a copy of her decree from his own lawyers. He had talked his father into granting him a vacation, saying he wanted to be out of town while the gossips had their way with the news. And he had declared, play the sort of ex-her husband if Mr. Hoffman's benefit and get away with it, because he was glad it was over and he wasn't married any longer to a frizzle-headed nitwit.

Red Nose Is Symptom Of Bodily Disturbance

Contrary to Popular Opinion It Isn't Always Due to Excessive Use of Alcohol

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

ALMOST EVERYONE goes through embarrassing periods of skin eruptions, such as pimples, boils and other unsightly blemishes. In most instances the disturbance is of a temporary nature.

The nose is a skin blemish that may persist for years. No doubt you have seen some individuals with an enlarged and red nose and have hastily concluded that the owner must be the victim of alcohol. It is true that the liberal use of alcohol may lead to this disturbance, but there are plenty of other causes.

Red nose may be the result of some chronic digestive disturbance. It may be associated with menstrual and uterine disorders, or continued exposure to cold wind or severe cold. In many instances the disturbance can be traced to the excessive use of tea, coffee or other stimulating beverage. In women it is often the result of some serious nervous upset.

Faulty Diet a Cause
I venture to say that overindulgence in starchy foods, such as rice, wheat, corn, and other foods rich in carbohydrates, sometimes gives rise to red nose. Persons who live sedentary lives and indulge in a poorly balanced diet, exceedingly rich in starchy foods, may readily develop this annoying symptom. It often accompanies such skin disturbances as acne, eczema or psoriasis.

Redness of the nose may disappear when starchy foods are avoided. The diet should be free from excessive quantities of salt, peppers, spices and other condiments, as well as alcohol, tea, coffee and other stimulating beverages. Drink at least six glasses of water every day. Daily elimination is important. It may be necessary to resort to the use of mineral oil or alkalis, but strong or drastic cathartics should be avoided.

Early Treatment Essential
In those cases where the underlying cause can be traced to anemia, it is essential that the diet contain abundant and nourishing food. Iron, strychnine, cod liver oil and other tonics are often beneficial. If the disturbance is due to menstrual or uterine disorders proper medical attention should be given.

Boils and pimples of the nose are common afflictions caused by infections of the skin. As a rule they can be traced to negligence in the daily hygiene of the face and hands.

Local applications of sulphur preparations or other soothing ointments are of temporary value only. Bear in mind that permanent relief can be obtained only when the underlying cause is found and corrected. Never neglect this condition and remember that when it is treated in the beginning the condition is readily cured. But if allowed to exist for a long time certain changes take place in the skin over the nose which make the trouble difficult to cure.

Answers to Health Queries
S. J. K. Q.—What can be done to eradicate pimples and other blemishes? What kind of a doctor should I see about a condition of this kind?

A—Proper diet and elimination should clear the complexion and benefit the entire system. See your family doctor. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Mrs. C. G. R. Q.—I am troubled with a catarrhal condition and inflamed sinuses. What would you advise?

A—For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

H. C. A. Q.—I am a boy of 17. My face and neck are covered with many brown blemishes that I have often heard referred to as liver spots. What would you advise?

A—For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AT THE GRAND
Timely, universally interesting and rich in entertainment quality, "Coming Out Party," Fox Film's latest release, at the Grand Theatre, proved to be a darling and realistic expose of the dignified debutante racket.

L. Lasky, producer, has gone to the society pages for his material and has produced a lavish film that is packed with laughs, romance, gaiety and music.

Going behind the scenes, the film depicts the petty hates and desires of debutantes, and their ambitious, social climbing mothers. Convinced social secretaries, ambitious band leaders, and "stags" trying to "crash" coming out parties, are few of the choice morsels served.

PLAN OF BUSINESS FOR RECOVERY READY FOR PRESIDENT

AMES CARRIES GROUP'S IDEAS

Ten Steps For Continuance of NRA Disclosed as Conference Ends.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The principles of recovery agreed upon by the leadership of American business were to be presented to President Roosevelt today.

Fresh from the extraordinary conference of the "best minds" of commerce and industry hastily called together at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., C. B. Ames, chairman of that meeting, arrived here this morning with the document in his pocket. Ames is president of the Texas company.

As for NRA, the conference said: "The administration has indicated its desire for further trial of certain features of the act."

After holding the government responsible for the desire for NRA's continuance, the conference, which was guided in its deliberations by Owen D. Young and John J. Raskob, laid down principles for extension of certain NRA provisions for another year from the expiration date in June.

PRINCIPLES LISTED

1. The principles should be volunteered by industries if a majority in an industry want it the who's industry would have to conform.
2. The labor provisions of these adopted codes should include prohibition of child labor, hour and minimum wage provisions, and minimum wage provisions, and individual or collective bargaining.
3. In industries which go without codes and child labor, low wages and long hours make their appearance, such industries are "appealed to" to apply for a code so as to correct the evils.
4. Codes and their fair trade practice provisions should be temporary to "secure the restoration of the sound functioning of the competitive system by mitigating the effects of destructive competition."

tion aggravated by the depression."

5. Natural resource industries require specific treatment for the sake of conservation.

6. The law should allow industries which wish to ask for extension of their present codes until their new voluntary codes have been prepared.

7. The government's code administration or the industry in question should be mutually able to terminate codes by serving notice upon one another.

8. The new legislation should supersede any other statute with which it might conflict. (The National Recovery Act in its passage was amended to make clear that it repealed no element of the Sherman anti-trust law.)

9. Assessments for paying administrative costs of codes should be mandatory, not voluntary.

10. The end of the Blue Eagle as a required device for participants in codes.

SEWER WORK IS UNDERWAY

Ashville Project Now Progressing; Other News of Village.

ASHVILLE, Dec. 20.—Work on the treatment plant of Ashville's sewage system is progressing nicely. Contractor Stoner has excavated to a depth of about 10 feet and considerable water was encountered which will require that a pump will be necessary to continue the work as the pit will be 21 feet in depth. This is for the Imhoff settling tank, which in reality is a huge septic tank. South of this tank is two sludge beds which take care of the refuse solids while the fluids will be carried in a 12-in sewer through the Cromley bottom to Little Walnut creek.

E. C. Bartling & Son's force of workmen laid this line Tuesday.

The machinery for the sewer project arrived Monday, and as soon as the sewer pipe arrives Contractor C. J. Wetzel of Dayton, will begin operations. When he starts work Ashville will have five contracts engaged—three on water works and two on sewers.

The $32,000 in sewer bonds were delivered to the State Treasurer last week having been purchased by the Teachers' Retirement System, and these funds will be available soon.

DRILLERS HAVE TROUBLE

Baker & Son of Columbus, subcontractors are having trouble in drilling the new well. At a depth of about 12 feet they struck a large boulder which several charges of dynamite would not dislodge, and they moved to a new site a few feet distant hoping to have better success.

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Ebricht, son Gene and daughter, Mrs. Irene Addleson, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Messick and daughter Joetta, of Columbus, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Laura Messick.

Edward Hoffines is confined to his home by illness. Nolan Roll and family have removed to Duvall where he is conducting a meat market and grocery for C. E. Baum.

Mrs. Martha McNeal and family now occupy the Squire property on Long-st. vacated by Nolan Roll and family.

John Miller, aged 82 years, is seriously ill at his home on Scioto-st.

The low places in Community park are being filled with the excess dirt from the waterworks project.

COLUMBUS GETS HUGE PWA FUND

COLUMBUS, Dec. 20.—The Public Works Administration today had approved an extension to the Columbus municipal light plant to cost $1,030,000. The approval has been delayed over a year but completes an energetic program for the city with the exception of a bridge.

The government will allow an outright grant of $250,000 loaning the city the remainder.

CITY HOSPITAL

and the county are responsible for their own patients and should be made to pay the bills," he declared. L. T. Shaner, safety director, expressed his views when he said "I have gone to the townships and have heard the story that they have no money for such purposes and that the county will not provide it. I've also gone to the commissioners and have been refused there."

"The amount of money now on the books exceeds $3,500," Dr. Jones said. He also paid attention to the monthly reports of collections and expenses at the institution which are read to council. "You don't know what those reports mean," he stated. "You don't know whether the money received is on new or old bills and you are not acquainted with the expenditures."

A more clear and complete set of books for the institution was advocated.

Councilman Marion said he believed it was up to council itself to take more interest in the hospital and after an investigation report back to council.

SEES NEW EXPENSE

Attention of the 'Dads' was called by Dr. Jones to the fact that a big bill of expense will be necessary before long with new laundry and bedding required. "The hospital has been operating for four years," he asserted, "and things naturally wear out."

TWO KILLED IN RIOT IN SOUTH: GUARD RUSHED

outsiders of the city were overturned, saturated with gasoline and burned.

Efforts of firemen to save the courthouse structure were nullified when the mob cut the fire hoses.

All available policemen and deputy sheriffs were rushed to the municipal water works to thwart reported plans to dynamite the building.

PRISONERS MOVED

Authorities were prepared to remove the 20 prisoners from the county jail after cries of "burn the jail house" were voiced by mob leaders.

The mob was still milling about the ruins of the courthouse early today, demanding that the negro prisoner be handed over by authorities. Threats of invading the negro quarter, where the population had hidden itself, failed to materialize.

In the earlier rioting, marked by three bloody attacks on the militiamen guarding Harris, Raleigh Edwards, 30, a house painter, and an unidentified white man were killed. Edwards was bayoneted through the stomach.

Two of the seven wounded, Gilbert Freeman and Pat Lawes, were believed dying. Both were shot by the militiamen.

The threatening mob gathered when Harris was brought to trial yesterday before Judge T. L. Coleman. Militiamen, with fixed bayonets, ringed the building and machine guns were mounted in the windows.

Tear gas bombs and rifle bullets repulsed the first assault and the crowd gained more recruits.

Militiamen brought their bayonet into play when the crowd again stormed the courthouse entrance, but the troops were driven back to the doorway. Men armed with dynamite started digging at the foundations of the building to place the explosives, but the troops repulsed the effort.

TWO FOUND DEAD

Again the crowd, brandishing pistols and clubs, surged forward, forcing the militiamen back. Two machine guns opened fire, spraying the rioters with bullets.

Bayonets again were brought into play. When the attack subsided the two men were found dead. Seven others lay on the ground wounded.

Judge Coleman declared a mistrial when the rioting began.

SALLY'S SALLIES

Many a would-be bachelor gets married through a miss understanding

National guardsmen and deputy sheriffs wrapped the negro prisoner in an army coat, fitted him with a gas mask and rushed him out of town in an automobile.

Public feeling against Harris had been running at fever heat in the community since his arrest Nov. 19, but it was deemed safe to bring the negro here with the military escort, under command of Col. John R. Stark of Nashville.

The raging mob hurled insults and stoned the guardsmen when they marched from the courthouse to their encampment, but it was not until the crowd learned that it had been tricked and deprived of lynching Harris that the attack on the courthouse was resumed.

This time only police and deputy sheriffs were on hand to protect the building. Screaming and brandishing their weapons the mob soon had possession of the building. Cans of gasoline were emptied on stairways and flooring of the building's interior and soon the structure, built 75 years ago, was a mass of roaring flames.

A Christmas Thought

EACH year we witness the recurring miracle of a world temporarily transformed by the spirit of Christmas. At the approach of this holiday season people think less about their individual differences, and more about their common interests and welfare.

Why should this transformation be temporary? Why must a world, groping in the darkness of innumerable problems, emerge briefly into the narrow band of Christmas light and warmth, only to stumble back into darkness again? The greatest need of the world today is the growth of an all-year Christmas spirit of good-will and co-operation. It would solve most of the problems of the future. . . . It is in this spirit that we wish you a Merry Christmas, and a full and Happy New Year.

Labor Supports Justice Black of New York For U. S. Supreme Court

WASHINGTON.—Organized labor will be ready with a candidate of its own when the next vacancy on the U. S. Supreme Court occurs.

He is quiet-spoken, square-jawed Justice William Harmon Black of the New York Supreme Court, one of the most liberal members on that noted tribunal. New York already is represented in the Supreme Court by Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo.

In a red-hot decision upholding the hotly controversial Section 7a, Judge Black declared the law to be labor's Magna Charta; asserted that without it industrial progress could not be made.

"The court," he said, "knows no more courageous piece of legislation ever adopted, or more appropriate to such a pressing emergency."

Labor hailed the decision as its most signal court victory under the New Deal regime. Employers prepared to take the verdict to higher courts.

Cure-alls

No day passes without some new "discovery" being presented to government officials for restoring prosperity. Bred on such stories as that of Isaac Newton and the apple, thousands of "sensible people" hope to solve the "Hall of Fame" with their new "remedies."

From Salem, Missouri, comes word that a woodchopper and railroad tie maker who has spent a great deal of time thinking about financial subjects, has a plan for "complete restoration."

A shepherd, living near Buhl, Idaho, has divided his time between watching the sheep grazing in the foothills of the Rockies and concocting a new solution for the debt problem, with "knee-action" that will not bend to Europe.

A St. Louis physician, living on a houseboat, has plenty of time to think. Having hit upon a unique monetary theory, he wants to expound his ideas in a big way.

Nearly all of them are mailed to Washington.

Voluntary

A group of Senate veterans idling over the coffee and cigars in the Senate dining room were exchanging reminiscences of their service in the historic chamber.

The conversation turned to presidential officers they knew. Arizona's witty Henry Ashurst told this choice anecdote of the late Calvin Coolidge, when he was Vice-President.

A Republican senator, known more for his volubility than persuasiveness, was expounding at great length on a bill. Coolidge listened to him with increasing impatience.

Finally, he summoned Senator George McLean, Republican whip.

"Senator," Coolidge said, "you tell that man that he won't get a vote but his own if he keeps this up."

McLean dutifully approached the speaker, whispered Coolidge's message in his ear. The haranguer, without pausing in his tirade, shot back a whispered reply. McLean returned to the rostrum.

"What'd he say?" demanded Coolidge.

"He said for me to go to hell," "He did," Coolidge said. "Well, Senator, I know of no law, or rule of the Senate, which obliges you to do so."

CITY HOSPITAL CHARITY CASES ARE DISCUSSED

Councilmen Intend to Pay More Heed to Operation of Berger

DR. JONES IS HEARD

Urges Separate Operation Of Laboratory

Charity cases at Berger hospital which are gradually running the institution deeper into "the red" were discussed from almost every conceivable angle at council meeting Wednesday evening. The appearance of Dr. Howard Jones to urge a full-time technician brought on the discussion with several members of council asking him questions concerning the institution's operation.

Dr. Jones presented council with an addition to the hospital ordinance which would cover the technician's duties. "The X-ray and laboratory departments of Berger hospital should be money makers for the institution," Dr. Jones said, "but someone should be put in charge of them at all times. The equipment is valued at several thousand dollars and the person in charge should be under sufficient bond to assure their proper care."

ADVOCATES BOOKS

The veteran physician, who has always taken an active part where the hospital is concerned, said that in October 80 cases went through these two departments and the lowest charge for any of them was $2. He advocated a separate set of books to be kept in the technician's hands alone.

The addition to the ordinance was placed in the hands of Solicitor Carl Leist with the matter referred to the hospital committee of C. O. Leist, Frank Marion and Ben H. Gordon.

As soon as this action was taken, Councilman Marion asked Dr. Jones "if the uses of the hospital are being abused?" He called attention to the great number of charity cases the expense from which are never paid. He asked who was responsible for so many such cases.

Dr. Jones answered him by saying that figures show several thousands of dollars charged to the poor of the city as individuals instead of to the city where the charge should have been made. "Most of these were charity cases in which the doctors, too, went without pay. If these bills had been made to the city the hospital would not show such a deficit as now appears to exist."

DOCTORS NOT TO BLAME

"The physicians of the city cannot send any charity case to the hospital without approval of the person responsible for the hospital (the safety director). The townships, too, must warrant their charity patients into the institution but many of them have not paid their bills."

"If the rules are followed closely no one can get into the hospital without a warrant from the proper person. The city, the townships and many of them have not paid their bills."

FOUR BANDITS GET $48,000

Payroll of Philadelphia Electric Co. Stolen In Daylight Robbery.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—In a bold daylight foray four armed bandits raided a branch office of the Philadelphia Electric company here today and escaped with a Christmas payroll consisting of $48,000 in cash.

The daring robbery was tentatively tied up by police with the criminal exploits of Robert Mais, arch-killer and escaped convict, hunted through the east. Investigating authorities said two employees of the electric company had partially identified the leader of the holdup gang as Mais, suspected kidnaper-killer of William "Big Bill" Weiss, Philadelphia night life figure.

Their faces hidden by heavy masks, the four bandits drove up to the branch office in a large sedan. Four robbers, each carrying a sawed-off shotgun, leaped out of the machine and walked briskly into the building.

After clubbing a watchman with the butt of a shotgun, the robbers proceeded to the paymaster's office. Denied admittance, they shot out a glass panel and unlocked the door. Twenty employees, awaiting wages at the payroll window, were instructed to keep their hands in the air while the bandits scooped up two leather bags containing the money.

TWO KILLED IN RIOT IN SOUTH: GUARD RUSHED

Mob Bent on Lynching Negro Tricked, Burns Court House

TOWN IS TERRORIZED Girl's Attacker Spirited to Nashville

SHELBYVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 20.—Five hundred national guardsmen converged on riot-torn Shelbyville today with orders to quell a lynch-maddened mob that dynamited and burned Bedford county courthouse after two white men were killed and seven wounded battling militiamen for possession of a negro prisoner.

While flames still licked at the ruins of the historic $150,000 courthouse the mob began breaking up early today into small groups of stalking demonstrators armed with pistols, knives and clubs. Occasional random shots were fired in the air by the rioters.

With the arrival of the national guard reinforcements, ordered here from Nashville by Gov. Hill McCallister, it was hoped that the mob would be completely dispersed.

NEGRO SPIRITED AWAY

Meanwhile the negro whom the rioters sought to lynch, E. K. Harris, 22, was safely lodged at Nashville under a heavy guard. He had been brought here under guard of 111 national guardsmen to stand trial on charges of attacking a 14-year-old white girl.

After repeated savage attacks on the courthouse, that were repulsed by the bayonets, tear gas and machine guns of the militiamen, rioting broke out anew last night when the mob learned that it had been tricked and the prisoner spirited away in the disguise of a soldier.

The rioters swept authorities aside and, after saturating the halls and stairways of the courthouse, where the negro had been on trial, set fire to the structure. Sticks of dynamite planted in the building exploded amid the gasoline-fed flames.

Four motor trucks left by the national guardsmen when they repaired to their bivouacs on the Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Bagdad.

The ship, an American-made Douglass plane which was widely praised for its performance in the marathon, left Cairo last night for Bagdad, bound for Kataria, Dutch East Indies with Christmas mail from Holland.

Airplanes and armored cars are scouring the desert between Cairo and Bagdad, the dispatch said. A terrific storm raged through the night and it was feared the ship had encountered serious difficulties.

In the London-Melbourne race, won by a pair of British fliers, the Douglas plane was piloted by K. D. Parmentier and J. J. Moll, veteran.

MARRIAGE REVEALED

Several councilmen took part in the discussion with W. M. Reid urging that thorough and stop streets by surveyed by the council and marked. After they are marked, he urged, see that the law is enforced.

W. F. Baker said he believed double parking especially on W. Main-st. should be looked after but other councilmen said this time of the year was a poor one to try to rectify the practice. Ben H. Gordon told his colleagues that one merchant is in favor of a rule barring parking before 9 a. m. to give prospective buyers a place to park before all the business men of the city park their cars, some for the entire day.

Nearly all were agreed that the traffic light used at Court and High-sts is the best light in the city. Several were in favor of moving it to Court and Main-sts.

Three Elevator Safes 'Cracked'

Kiss Cost $1,000

Madison-Co. Scene of Activities of Safe Robbing Gang; Loot Is Small.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Old-time professional safe-blowers, who are reported to be concentrating upon grain elevators in rural sections, were suspected today in connection with the cracking of two safes at Sedalia and one at South Solon last night or early this morning.

The veggs obtained only 68 pennies from two safes which were blown in the office of the Sedalia Grain & Lumber Co., but they took along a $75 typewriter also. Damage to the two safes, one of which was unlocked and could have been opened without effort, was estimated at $150.

From Sedalia, the veggs went to South Solon where they "cracked" the safe of the Guy Curry elevator. They found the safe empty but rifled a cash drawer in the office of between $8 and $10.

Fingerprint experts from the London prison farm conducted an investigation but the veggs left no tell-tale marks leading to the conviction that the safe-blowers were old-time professionals.

COUNCIL LOOKS TO SALES TAX

Little Money on Hand For Operation of All Departments; List Balances.

City council is looking forward to receipts from the newly-voted sales tax to solve its financial problems. Just when the sales tax money will start coming into the city coffers is not certain.

Ben H. Gordon, chairman of the finance committee, recommended to council Wednesday evening that bills now held against the city which are the most urgent should be "drawn money" now available. "Others will have to wait," he said.

At present the city has $12,238.69 in all its funds. This is divided $5,364.85 in general; $1,781.18 in library; $915.04 in the Marcus Brown fund for the library; $798.81 in auto street repair; $1,608.91 in gasoline tax, and $1,770.90 in hospital.

There are a number of outstanding bills of considerable consequence which would cut the general fund almost in half if all were paid. The bills include, $38.37 for repair of the city Ford; $168 to Mary Butler for nursing; $170.34 to physicians; $32.50 for ambulances; $180 for burials; $65 for food, rent and coal. Money needed at the hospital includes: salaries, $1,250; provisions, $350; medical supplies, $350; other supplies, $75; fuel and light, $50.

The city must continue operation and payment of its employees including elective officials from money now at hand.

ALEXANDER SEES WHITE CHRISTMAS

By International News Service.

While snow blanketed many portions of the state, Weatherman W. H. Alexander, at Columbus, today declared that chances for a "white Christmas" in Ohio were "very favorable."

According to Alexander, light snows will continue tonight and tomorrow with warmer, unsettled weather by the end of the week. Sunday and Monday probably will be fair, he said, with the weather taking a turn toward the colder.

"It looks like enough snow will fall between now and then to give us a White Christmas," he said.

The latest snowfall was ushered into the state by rain. However, in the northern section of the state, from two to seven inches of snow was reported while Columbus had a half inch of snow, and Cincinnati 6 inch of snow and rain, mostly rain.

BARBERS TOLD TO BEGIN CODE PRICES FRIDAY

Board to See That Prices of 40 and 25 cents Are Enforced

PROSECUTION FACED

Davis Instructed to Support Code Order

All Circleville barbers were warned by Ray W. Davis, prosecuting attorney, Thursday that they must comply with minimum rates as established by the Ohio barber code compliance board, or suffer the consequences.

An order has been given to the prosecutor to see that all barbers are charging the code price of 40 cents for haircuts and 25 cents for shaves starting Friday. At present the rates are 25 cents for haircuts and 20 or 15 cents for shaves in most shops.

Shortly after the code was put into effect in the state practically all local shops adhered to the law, charging the 40-25 schedule. It was not long, however, until first one shop then another started to slash the price, the later ones to save their own businesses in the face of cut-rate prices.

THREE ON BOARD

The compliance committee for this city includes Everett Ferguson, John Wilson and Sherman Leasure.

Heavy fines are provided under the law for those who fail to comply.

The local shops also agreed on an hour and closing time, which all shops were to observe 7 in the evening except Sunday 10 p. m. being the hour they close. They were also to close Wednesday at noon but many have been flaunting that agreement.

Strict enforcement of the minimum charge is pledged by the compliance board with the aid of Prosecutor Davis.

SUSPECT KILLED

COLUMBUS, Dec. 20.—Dodging a bombardment of dishes, Patrolman C. V. McGrew today shot and killed Henry Harrison, 45-year-old negro burglar suspect, in the pantry of an east Town-at home here.

McGrew trailed the suspect by his tracks in the snow and trapped him in the pantry where he attempted to battle his way to escape by hurling dishes at the officer. McGrew finally was forced to shoot.

ESTIMATE OF MONEY FOR SCHOOLS MADE

G. D. McDowell, superintendent of county schools, announced Thursday that he has received a communication from Dr. D. H. This is considerably below the money needed.

JAPAN TO DEFY NAVAL POWERS; READY FOR ARMS RACE

DEFY HURLED BY MINISTER

Navy Now Stronger In Personnel and Morale Than U. S., He Charges.

TOKIO, Dec. 20.—Defiance of other naval powers, with the first warning from so high an authority that Japan will not shrink from a naval building race, was hurled today by Japan's foreign minister, Koki Hirota.

"If the powers fail to recognize

Japan's fair and just attitude," Hirota said, referring to his country's decision to kill the 5-5-3 ratio by abrogating the Washington treaty, "if they insist on having their own way, Japan may refuse to make concessions, and will resist them."

STRONGER PERSONNEL
Hirota's declaration indirectly gave the seal of government approval to the declaration by Rengo, the semi-official news agency, that Japan is fully prepared for any building competition. The Japanese navy, according to Rengo, is superior to the American in personnel, morale, and building technique.

The foreign minister also reiterated Japan's demand that battleships and aircraft carriers be abolished "for the sake of world peace."

Japan favors more submarines,

which she views as "defensive" vessels.

"Japan is a rising nation, endowed with lofty pride," Hirota said, "and in advocating the policy of abolishing battleships and aircraft carriers, she is ready to make considerable sacrifices."

He added that Japan is willing to be a party to a "treaty safeguarding peace."

The belief that discussions of naval limitation problems will continue in spite of yesterday's adjournment of the London conversations was expressed in official circles.

HASTEN PARLEYS

It was understood that an agreement has been reached among Britain, the United States, and Japan to fix an early date for the resumption of the talks, and that, meanwhile, informal exchanges will continue in order to hasten the resumption of formal parleys.

SCIOTO-TWP

The Priscilla Doll contest ended at Thanksgiving time. All the girls in the seventh grade English class dressed their dolls as near like Priscilla as they could. The first prize doll was Marjorie Tomlinson's, the second best was Doris Hill's and the third was Twila Sheets'. Two of the boys, Evan Dean and Paul Green, built a church and the story of the "Courtship of Miles Standish" ended with the wedding at the church.

The eighth grade English class is spending some time on oral reading. The need of better readers has been made evident so each pupil is trying very hard to improve. A daily record of each pupil's mistakes is kept.

The Freshman English class is studying poetry. They have spent some time scanning and studying meter. They tried to make rhyming couplets according to form but they were not a success as to meter even if they did rhyme. From this they went into the study of the ballad.

The following seventh and eighth grade pupils who missed no words in spelling during the past six weeks are: Evan Dean, Doris Hill, Virginia Hill, Twila Sheets and Marjorie Tomlinson in the seventh grade and Opabelle Beavers in the eighth grade.

The seventh grade honor roll for the second six weeks was: Warren Beers, Gardner Beatty, Evan Dean, Virginia Hill, and Doris Hill. In the eighth grade are Opabelle Beavers, Virginia Hoskins, Harold Norris, Peter Tomlinson, Lawrence Neal and Anna Louise Bandy.

As a special assignment the Commercial Law class last week one day made cross word puzzles using terms studied in law. Whenever we have any spare time one of these puzzles is put on the board for the class to work out together.

A purely social program has been planned for the December meeting of the Societas Latina. This program consists of Christmas songs in Latin and Latin games.

Last week we gave the state tests in all subjects. The required tests have been sent into the State Department of Education and we are now awaiting the results of the tests throughout the state.

The second year typing class is working on a special assignment—spelling and division of words into syllables.

According to present plans Scioto will play its next basketball game with New Holland Thursday Dec. 20. The grades will present their Christmas program Friday afternoon, and the high school will present a combination pageant and play on Friday night. Everyone is invited.

Unlike most of the other contestants, Parmentier and Moll made the trip like an ordinary commercial flight, stopping at all regular airports and giving their passengers and crew time for food and rest.

A high rate of speed was maintained nevertheless, and the whole world joined in tribute to the precision and apparent lack of hazard with which the venture was carried out.

Parmentier and Moll would be

PATTERN 9218

There's nothing like a new house frock or two to give a fillip to the joys of sweet domesticity! So why not make yourself several of them in this attractive new model? It has a feminine little ruffle to emphasize its youthful neckline—a slim panel down the front of the bodice—and cunning puffed sleeves, slashed to show a glimpse of pretty arms beneath. And it opens like a coat so that it will not only be easy to slip into in a jiffy, but also may be spread out flat to be ironed—a grand idea for the busy housewife! Of course, if you prefer, the sleeves may be made without the slit.

Pattern 9218 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 34. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric.

PATTERN 5134

Though it isn't possible for us to have butterflies in the middle of winter, the needlewoman can conjure them for herself, using scraps of gay-colored material to do so. This butterfly—a nice big patch—is easy to sew on. You can applique it on leaving the edge raw and buttonholing it down, or you can turn under the edge and fasten it with slip stitch, blanket or outline stitch. The touches of embroidery on the patch add to its brightness as do the sprays of French knot flowers that complete the design. These motifs are lovely on tea-cloths, scarfs, pillow covers, buffet sets and many other linens.

In pattern 5134 you will find two 7 inch butterfly corners as shown, two 4 1/2 inch matching flower sprays and four 2 1/2 x 3 inch flower sprays; directions for doing applique; illustrations of all stitches needed; material requirements, and color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., 124 W. Main-st., Circleville, O.

YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

THE remaining days of the week will be busy shopping days in Circleville's stores. While local merchants without exception state that the holiday business so far has been considerably larger than last season, they anticipate the peak in sales during the days remaining before Santa Claus makes his annual visit.

City and small town merchants handling practically all lines of merchandise are reporting through their organizations that stocks are being rapidly depleted by early shoppers, and that there has been an unexpected trend to the better quality of merchandise for gift purposes, denoting that there is a larger surplus of cash budgeted for this particular purpose than there has been for several years.

Many of Circleville's merchant establishments have been crowded with eager shoppers during the past few days. Window displays are attractive, merchandise is well displayed in the various establishments, and extra salespeople have been employed to aid shoppers in their selections.

There also seems to be a clear indication that "buying at home" has been adopted as a slogan by practically all residents of the community this season, a slogan that should be in effect the year round. Shoppers have learned by comparison that local merchants give them service in quality, selectivity and price comparable to similar establishments in much larger cities, and consequently give the home merchant first consideration.

ADMIRE HOME CITY

AT the approach of the Yuletide season, Circleville's business and residence sections are reaching a high standard of excellence in beautiful holiday decorations. The array of colored lights and special decorations at the intersection of Main and Court-sts causes much favorable comment from residents and visitors alike, and individual decorations are fitting and elaborate. The shopping district attracts much attention and favorable comment, and visitors are loud in their praise of the decorations throughout the city as a whole.

The remaining days of this week will see many homes about the city donning true holiday attire, which will add much to the beauty as well as the spirit of Christmas.

HOW CIVILIZED?

A FREQUENTLY heard opinion that too many people are going to college finds formal expression in a report to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers by a divisional officer, Marion B. Richardson. Mr. Richardson says the proportion of college graduates to the population is far too high, from a materialistic standpoint, and is likely to have political repercussions.

The figure given in this report is "nearly 3,000,000" college graduates, which looks like a good many. One in every forty-four persons, the report says, a proportion far exceeding that of any other nation. But state it in percentages and it doesn't look quite so formidable, no more than 2 1/2 per cent. The statement that the proportion is higher than in any other country is not surprising, considering the fact that under our system of compulsory education, schooling is more general here than in most other countries.

The report sidesteps its own case. Although it thinks the percentage of engineers one for every 320 persons is too high for the good of the several engineering professions, it finds that "the opportunity for arriving at a job of college grade is fair." That, if true, is good news for the young men in the discouraging times. Engineering, despite the alleged overcrowding, is named in the report as fourth among the professions from the income-producing standpoint. It takes considerable credulity to accept the report's statement that a Protestant clergyman has the best chances of a good income, followed in order by the physicians and lawyers.

The materialistic standpoint is not the only one that appeals to college graduates. Many of them, in fact, place the satisfaction of an education higher. But the meat of the question is this: Is 2 1/2 per cent of the population too large a proportion to receive a higher education? Is it more than the country can absorb? If it is, how civilized are we?

Mr. Richardson's advice loses none of its timeliness in consequence of the printer's error which made it read that it is time for manufacturers to "renubinate their pants."

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

THE carol was originally a joyous dance, a sign of liberation from the religious austerity of the Puritan era. Percy Dearmer, writing in "The Oxford Book of Carols," says: "The carol, by forsaking the timeless contemplative melodies of the church, began the era of modern music, which throughout has been based on the dance."

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Howard was obliged to spend Christmas day with his parents but on Christmas eve he and Caroline put up a tree in the house on Edge Street and festooned it with silver and hung it with blue lights. There were masses of white and yellow chrysanthemums in tall glass vases that showed the long stems, wreaths of hemlock and holly, and just where Howard wanted it—a bunch of mistletoe.

The house was gay and festive in appearance on Christmas morn when Caroline and her father sat down to a breakfast of waffles and honey, but their hearts were heavy. Suddenly Caroline put down her fork, pushed her chair back and flew around to her father. He held her like a child while she sobbed out her loneliness.

Presently, with Mrs. Stevenson, they gathered up their gifts at the foot of the tree and opened them. There was a wristwatch for Caroline from Howard, and a vest watch, and chain, for her father, a camel's hair sweater for Mrs. Stevenson, and all the small things that Caroline had made for Philip. From him there was a surprise for her—her mother's wedding ring. Caroline made him wish it on her finger—just for the day.

He was, for a moment, the old Philip of pride and stinging rebuffs, bearing as he slipped the platinum band over his daughter's slender finger and bent his lips to it with the wish in his heart that it should bring her more happiness than it had brought to her mother.

There were more presents to unwrap. Caroline's hand-bag for Mrs. Stevenson, a box of child-made gifts from the twins, a knitted scarf and beret and hemstitched handkerchiefs from Fern. And then there was left a square box with a card from Mrs. Stuart and Malcolm. It was addressed to the Rutledges, and Philip opened it.

Caroline was conscience stricken when she saw that it was a Christmas cake that obviously Mrs. Stuart had herself baked for them.

Her father, noting her expression, said: "Didn't you send any thing Caroline?"

Caroline shook her head. "Only a card I've scarcely seen them for weeks. I know I ought to be ashamed—after all their kindness—"

Mr. Rutledge glanced about the room. "You might take over those chrysanthemums," he suggested, nodding toward the largest vaseful. "And this box of glass fruits," Caroline added, picking up one of Howard's gifts. "Wrap some paper around the flower stems for me, please," she said to Mrs. Stevenson. "I'll go right over."

There was an eagerness in her manner that was slightly perplexing to her father. Caroline herself was unaware of it. She hurried into the hall and got a coat from the closet, but she did not stop for hat or gloves, although it was snowing heavily.

She was almost hidden behind the flower stems when she rang the Stuart's doorbell. Malcolm answered. "Merry Christmas!" she cried gaily. Then, "Oh—this box under my arm. It's slipping! Take it quick!"

Malcolm reached out and took the box. "Come in," he invited. "You're really there. I can't see you." Caroline still held the flowers as she stepped across the threshold. Malcolm closed the door behind her and turned to take them. The day was darkening; he had snapped on the hall light. It glistened in the wedding ring as Caroline extended her hands.

"Why, what's the matter?" Malcolm had uttered a smothered sound, expressive of unhappy surprise. But he smiled as he took the flowers from Caroline. "I can't see you," she said. "It's just Merry Christmas or Merry Christmas and much happiness."

"Well," Caroline replied, not yet realizing what he meant, "it isn't really a merry Christmas, Malcolm, or a very happy one, either, in our house. But you and your mother were very sweet to remember us. I hope it is a happier one for you."

"I'm sorry," Malcolm said softly. "Mother's in the kitchen. Shall I tell her you're here, or will you come with me?"

"I'll come with you," Caroline said quickly. "I love your mother's kitchen. It always smells of spice or something nice."

Mrs. Stuart was happy to see her. She put down the goose she was dressing, dried her hands, and took the chrysanthemums from Malcolm. "I never saw such big ones!" she exclaimed in delight. "How nice of you to bring them!"

Here, Malcolm, reach down that big pitcher for me until I find something better to put them in."

Relieved of the flowers she turned back to Caroline. "Let me look at you. Still too thin, but you're stronger, aren't you?"

She added the last word in tenderest sympathy, shaking her head. Caroline struggled to keep back her tears.

"There, there, cry if you feel like it," Mrs. Stuart soothed. "It wouldn't be natural if you didn't want to on the first Christmas."

"But it—it won't do any good," Caroline said brokenly. "And it will be harder for Father if I let go."

She held out her left hand. "He gave me Mother's wedding ring," she added in a whisper. Suddenly she looked at Malcolm. "Oh," she said, "you saw it, didn't you? And you thought that."

"You were married," he admitted. Mrs. Stuart frowned. "Malcolm, how could she when..." She stopped in embarrassment.

"Caroline begged," let's not talk about me. I came to thank you for the cake, Mrs. Stuart. I know it will be delicious. We'll eat it at dinner. Father and I will be alone. Mrs. Stevenson wants to go to her son's after she's roasted our turkey."

"Christmas alone isn't Christmas," Mrs. Stuart said sadly. "Malcolm and I hoped his Uncle Dan would come with his family and spend the day with us but they had to go to his wife's folks. We're just going to have a goose all by ourselves."

"Why," Caroline cried, "that's silly, isn't it? You two alone, and Father and I. There must be some family in the neighborhood that would like a goose. Let's find one, and then you and Malcolm can help us get the turkey. It would cheer Father immensely. And I just can't bear the thought of that lonely dinner. Say you'll come—please."

The day, from that point on, became brighter for all of them, although the snow continued to fall in flakes so heavy and thick that the daylight was turned into a semiblaze of dusk.

Caroline brought out more red candles and softened the rooms with their light. There was a bowl of poinsettias on the dining table and red candles there, too.

Mr. Rutledge mixed the Christmas drink from an old family recipe and they drank to each other's good cheer. Mrs. Stuart watched him, encouraging him, driving down a week-end with Fern when the baby came, trying to give Howard all the time she could, and still working on at the factory.

Even her father thought this was far-fetched, had thought of every moment, and would never let himself be separated from her another Christmas day.

Caroline fell asleep assured of his love, and happy in the belief that she still loved him more than anyone else.

The few intervening weeks before Gwendolyn was to receive her degree flowed swiftly after that. Caroline was busy night and day, making most of her own trousseau with Mrs. Stevenson's help, fighting her father's temptations with him, encouraging him, driving down a week-end with Fern when the baby came, trying to give Howard all the time she could, and still working on at the factory.

SPEAKING OF CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS!

Red Nose Is Symptom Of Bodily Disturbance

Contrary to Popular Opinion It Isn't Always Due to Excessive Use of Alcohol

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

ALMOST EVERYONE goes through embarrassing periods of skin eruptions, such as pimples, boils and other unsightly blemishes. In most cases the disturbance is of a temporary nature. But redness of the nose is a skin blemish that may persist for years.

No doubt you have seen some individuals with an enlarged and red nose and have hastily concluded that the owner must be the victim of alcohol.

It is true that the liberal use of alcohol may lead to this disturbance, but there are plenty of other causes.

Red nose may be the result of some chronic digestive disturbance. It may be associated with menstrial and uterine disorders, or continued exposure to cold wind or severe climate. In many instances the disturbance can be traced to the excessive use of tea, coffee or other stimulating beverages. In women it is often the result of some serious nervous upset.

Faulty Diet a Cause

I venture to say that overindulgence in starchy foods, such as potatoes, peas, cakes, macaroni and other foods rich in carbohydrates, sometimes gives rise to red nose. Fatigue, excessive anxiety and nervousness in a poorly balanced diet, especially rich in starchy foods, may readily develop this annoying symptom. It often accompanies such skin disturbances as acne, eczema or psoriasis.

Redness of the nose may disappear when starchy foods are avoided. The diet should be free from excessive quantities of salt, pepper, spices and other condiments, as well as alcohol, tea, coffee and other stimulating beverages. Drink at least six glasses of water every day. Daily elimination is important. It may be necessary to resort to the use of mineral oil or alkalis, but strong or drastic cathartics should be avoided.

Early Treatment Essential

In those cases where the underlying cause can be traced to anemia, it is essential that the diet contain abundant and nourishing food, iron, strychnine, cod liver oil and other tonics are often beneficial. If the disturbance is due to menstrial or uterine disorders proper medical attention should be given.

Boils and pimples of the nose are common afflictions caused by infections of the skin. As a rule they can be traced to negligence in the daily hygiene of the face and hands.

Local applications of sulphur preparations or other soothing ointments are of temporary value only. Bear in mind that permanent relief can be obtained only when the underlying cause is found and corrected. Never neglect this condition and remember that when it is treated in the beginning the condition is readily cured. But if allowed to exist for a long time certain changes take place in the skin over the nose which make the trouble difficult to cure.

AT THE GRAND

Timely, universally interesting and rich in entertainment quality "Coming Out Party," Fox Film's latest release, at the Grand Theatre, proved to be a dawning and realistic expose of the dignified debutante racket. Jesse L. Lasky, producer, has gone to the society pages for his material and has produced a lavish film that is packed with laughs, romance, gaiety and music.

Going behind the scenes, the film depicts the petty hates and desires of debutantes, and their ambitious, social climbing mothers. Convincing social secretaries, ambitious band leaders, and "stags" trying to "crash" coming out parties, are few of the choice morsels served.

"Fine! Wonderful! Hold it!" Embracing the beautiful actress, the "extra" removed his long enough to say:

PLAN OF BUSINESS FOR RECOVERY READY FOR PRESIDENT

AMES CARRIES GROUP'S IDEAS

Ten Steps For Continuance of NRA Disclosed as Conference Ends.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The principles of recovery agreed upon by the leadership of American business were to be presented to President Roosevelt today.

Fresh from the extraordinary conference of the "best minds" of commerce and industry hastily called together at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., C. B. Ames, chairman of that meeting, arrived here this morning with the document in his pocket. Ames is president of the Texas company.

As for NRA, the conference said, "The administration has indicated its desire for further trial of certain features of the act."

After holding the government responsible for the desire for NRA's continuance, the conference, which was guided in its deliberations by Owen D. Young and John J. Raskob, laid down principles for extension of certain NRA provisions for another year from the expiration date in June.

PRINCIPLES LISTED

1. Codes should be volunteered by industries if a majority in an industry want it the whole industry would have to conform.
2. The labor provisions of these adopted codes should include prohibition of child labor, hour and minimum wage provisions, and individual or collective bargaining.
3. In industries which go without codes and child labor, low wages and long hours make their appearance, such industries are "appealed to" to apply for a code so as to correct the evils.
4. Codes and their fair trade practice provisions should be temporary to "secure the restoration of the sound functioning of the competitive system by mitigating the effects of destructive competition aggravated by the depression."
5. Natural resource industries require specific treatment for the sake of conservation.
6. The law should allow industries which wish to ask for extension of their present codes until their new voluntary codes have been prepared.
7. The government's code administration or the industry in question should be mutually able to terminate codes by serving notice upon one another.
8. The new legislation should supersede any other statute with which it might conflict. (The National Recovery Act in its passage was amended to make clear that it repeated no element of the Sherman anti-trust law.)
9. Assessments for paying administrative costs of codes should be mandatory, not voluntary.
10. The end of the Blue Eagle as a required device for participants in codes.

SEWER WORK IS UNDERWAY

Ashville Project Now Progressing; Other News of Village.

ASHVILLE, Dec. 20.—Work on the treatment plant of Ashville's sewage system is progressing nicely. Contractor Stoner has excavated to a depth of about 10 feet and considerable water was encountered which will require that a pump will be necessary to continue the work as the pit will be 21 feet in depth. This is for the Imhoff settling tank, which in reality is a huge septic tank. South of this tank is two sludge beds which take care of the refuse solids while the fluids will be carried in a 12-in sewer through the Cromley bottom to Little Walnut creek.

E. C. Bartling & Son's force of workmen laid this line Tuesday.

The machinery for the sewer project arrived Monday, and as soon as the sewer pipe arrives Contractor C. J. Wetzel of Dayton, will begin operations. When he starts work Ashville will have five contracts engaged—three on water works and two on sewers.

The $32,000 in sewer bonds were delivered to the State Treasurer last week having been purchased by the Teachers' Retirement System, and these funds will be available soon.

DRILLERS HAVE TROUBLE

Baker & Son of Columbus, subcontractors are having trouble in drilling the new well. At a depth of about 12 feet they struck a large boulder which several charges of dynamite would not dislodge, and they moved to a new site a few feet distant hoping to have better success.

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Ebricht, son Gene and daughter, Mrs. Irene Allison, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. McShok and daughter Joetta, of Columbus, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Laura Measick.

Edward Hoffines is confined to his home by illness.

Nolan Roll and family have removed to Duvall where he is conducting a meat market and grocery for C. E. Baum.

Mrs. Martha McNeal and family now occupy the Squire property on Long-st vacated by Nolan Roll and family.

John Miller, aged 52 years, is seriously ill at his home on Scioto-st.

The low places in Community park are being filled with the excess dirt from the waterworks project.

TIGERS PREPARING

Circleville Tigers, again rated as underdogs, are preparing for their trek to Chillicothe tomorrow evening when Earl Young's Red Devils will play. It will be the first time in years that a Blankenship is not on a Chillicothe team. Coach Young is said to be puzzled over a guard position, but he has plenty of boys ready to snatch up the duties.

Believe Shaughnessy and Bierman Considered For Job; Both in Denials.

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—Even if offered the job, Clark Shaughnessy, football coach at the University of Chicago, will not become a party to Senator Huey P. Long's ambition to whip Tulane with his Louisiana State eleven, it appeared certain today.

Shaughnessy is seeking Shaughnessy, his assistant coach at Louisiana State left vacant by the resignation of Capt. Lawrence "Biff" Jones met with a firm denial today.

I have not been approached with any offer to coach at Louisiana State," Shaughnessy, former coach at Tulane, stated.

A similar statement came from Bernie Bierman, coach of the Minnesota juggernaut that swept all before it last season. Bierman said: "I know nothing about it."

Bierman also is a former Tulane coach. Shaughnessy, it was learned, values his independence too highly to take the place that "Biff" Jones dropped because of Senator Long's insistence on dictating how the L. S. U. team should be run by a legislator who never played football.

It was recalled that Shaughnessy within the past two years had warned one of his former proteges that Senator Long could not see his hands off the L. S. U. football team.

SAM BYRD SOLD TO CINCINNATI

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—With the passing of Sam Byrd, baseball's best grinder, from the roster of the New York Yankees, only Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Earl Combs and Tony Lazzeri remains as holdovers from the regime of the late Miller Huggins.

Byrd was sold down the river yesterday to the Cincinnati Reds in a straight cash deal. It is understood the Reds paid $12,500 for him.

Byrd played six full seasons with the Yankees and a good part of that time was an understudy to Babe Ruth.

CARNEGIE TECH HAS GOOD CARD

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 20.—Holy Cross was added to the list of 1935 opponents for Carnegie Tech today, as the preliminary Tartan football schedule was announced.

Nine games have been carded and definite dates have been set for seven of them. Open dates include the Tartans' first encounter on September 28, and November 16.

3 CHAMPIONS IN GRUNT BOUT

COLUMBUS, Dec. 20.—Three world wrestling champions were expected to arrive here today for last minute workouts for the fourth annual Salvation Army Christmas fund and show tomorrow night.

They were Charles (Midget) Fleisher, light heavyweight, Philadelphia; Jack Reynolds, welterweight champion and Billy Thoms, wrestling coach at Indiana University, and winner of the junior midweight crown.

Fleisher will meet Tony Morrell, New York; Reynolds will grapple with Bobby Pearce, of Oklahoma, and Thoms will face "Bulldog" Jackson, of Alaska. A capacity crowd was expected for the charity show.

LUTHERANS LOSE

SPRINGFIELD, Dec. 20.—Wentworth's basketball team was groggy today after being snowed under by Davis-Ellis last night. The score was 52 to 31, with the Lutherans on the wrong end.

KING IS RETAINED AT CINCINNATI U.

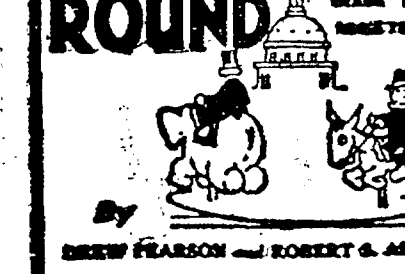

CINCINNATI, Dec. 20.—Dana King, athletic director and head football coach at the University of Cincinnati, was sure of his job today despite rumors that he might be displaced.

"Mr. King," said Dr. Raymond Walters, president of the school in a formal statement, "will continue as head coach of the football team as well as director of athletics."

The committee of the board of directors has agreed that, if Mr. King wishes, he may engage a subordinate coach for the backfield or other departments for next season," Dr. Walters continued. "This action is definite and official."

The committee joins with the president in expressing satisfaction with the scheduling of Indiana University for the 1935 football season.

The rumors that King was "out" as football coach started early last season when his team failed to get away to a good start. However, they have been repeated less frequently since the end of the gridiron season which the Bearcats finished in great form.

COLUMBUS GETS HUGE PWA FUND

COLUMBUS, Dec. 20.—The Public Works administration today has approved an extension to the Columbus municipal light plant to cost $1,030,000. The approval has been delayed a year but completes an energetic program for the city with the exception of a bridge.

The government will allow an outright grant of $250,000 loaning the city the remainder.

and the county are responsible for their own patients and should be made to pay the bills," he declared. L. T. Shaner, safety director, expressed his views when he said "I have gone to the townships and have heard the story that they have no money for such purposes and that the county will not provide it. I've also gone to the commissioners and have been refused there."

"The amount of money now on the books exceeds $3,500," Dr. Jones said. He also paid attention to the monthly reports of collections and expenses at the institution which are read to council. "You don't know what those reports mean," he stated. "You don't know whether the money received is on new or old bills and you are not acquainted with the expenditures."

A more clear and complete set of books for the institution was advocated.

Councilman Marion said he believed it was up to council itself to take more interest in the hospital and after an investigation report back to council.

SEES NEW EXPENSE

Attention of the 'Dads' was called by Dr. Jones to the fact that a big bill of expenses will be necessary before long with new laundry and bedding required. "The hospital has been operating for four years," he asserted, "and things naturally wear out."

TWO KILLED IN RIOT IN SOUTH: GUARD RUSHED

outsider of the city were turned, saturated with gasoline and burned.

Efforts of firemen to save the courthouse structure were nullified when the mob cut the fire hoses.

All available policemen and deputy sheriffs were rushed to the municipal water works to thwart reported plans to dynamite the building.

PRISONERS MOVED

Authorities were prepared to remove the 20 prisoners from the county jail after cries of "burn the jail house" were voiced by mob leaders.

The mob was still milling about the ruins of the courthouse early today, demanding that the negro prisoner be handed over by authorities. Threats of invading the negro quarter, where the population had hidden itself, failed to materialize.

In the earlier rioting, marked by three bloody attacks on the militiamen guarding Harris, Raleigh Edwards, 30, a house painter, and an unidentified white man were killed. Edwards was bayoneted through the stomach.

Two of the seven wounded, Gilbert Freeman and Pat Lawes, were believed dying. Both were shot by the militiamen.

The threatening mob gathered when Harris was brought to trial yesterday before Judge T. L. Coleman. Militiamen, with fixed bayonets, ringed the building and machine guns were mounted in the windows.

Tear gas bombs and rifle bullets repulsed the first assault and the crowd gained in numbers.

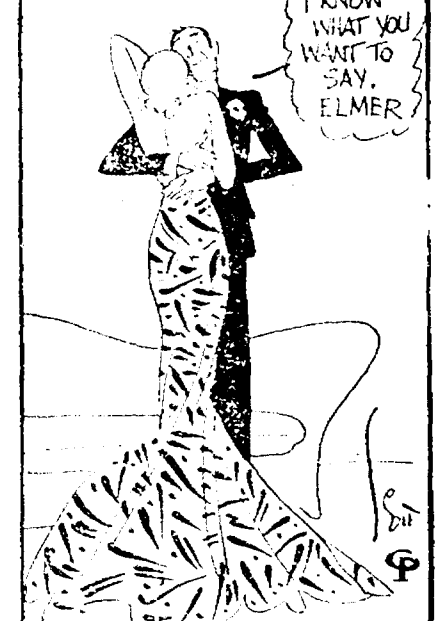

Militiamen brought their bayonets into play when the crowd again stormed the courthouse entrance, but the troops were driven back to the doorway. Men armed with dynamite started dishing at the foundations of the building to place the explosive, but the troops repulsed the effort.

TWO FOUND DEAD

Again the crowd, brandishing pistols and clubs, surged forward, forcing the militiamen back. Two machine guns opened fire, spraying the rioters with bullets. Bayonets again were brought into play. When the attack subsided the two men were found dead. Seven others lay on the ground wounded.

Judge Coleman declared a mistrial when the rioting began.

National guardsmen and deputy sheriffs wrapped the negro prisoner in an army coat, lifted him with a gas mask and rushed him out of town in an automobile.

Public feeling against Harris had been running at fever heat in the community since his arrest Nov. 19, but it was deemed safe to bring the negro here with the military escort, under command of Col. John R. Stark of Nashville.

The raging mob hurled insults and stoned the guardsmen when they marched from the courthouse to their encampment, but it was not until the crowd learned that it had been tricked and deprived of lynching Harris that the attack on the courthouse was resumed.

This time only police and deputy sheriffs were on hand to protect the building. Screaming and brandishing their weapons the mob soon had possession of the building. Cans of gasoline were emptied on stairways and flooring of the building's interior and soon the structure, built 75 years ago, was a mass of roaring flames.

A Christmas Thought

EACH year we witness the recurring miracle of a world temporarily transformed by the spirit of Christmas. At the approach of this holiday season people think less about their individual differences, and more about their common interests and welfare.

Why should this transformation be temporary? Why must a world, groping in the darkness of innumerable problems, emerge briefly into the narrow band of Christmas light and warmth, only to stumble back into darkness again? The greatest need of the world today is the growth of an all-year Christmas spirit of good-will and co-operation. It would solve most of the problems of the future. . . . It is in this spirit that we wish you a Merry Christmas, and a full and Happy New Year.
